There are a lot of films in which photograph (or photographs) play a role of the main character or organize the whole action. Of course, many of you will think at first about “Blow up” by Michelangelo Antonioni. However, there is lot more of them.

You can also watch films, which tell stories about work of photo correspondents, both documentary and feature, for example “Harrison’s Flowers” about war in former Yugoslavia, and “The Death of Kevin Carter”. The second one was directed by Dan Kraus and is a document about Bang-Bang Club. In this film stars for example James Nachtwey, a photographer himself.

Moreover, I will recommend you a document about four famous photographs – “Looking for an Icon”.
